King Charles, Christianity and Other Faiths.

In 1996 King Charles said that he wanted to be not “Defender of the Faith,” (a title that refers to defending the Church of England,) but “Defender of Faith,” which refers to defending all faith within the country. On the face of it, this put the position of the Church of England as the established church in doubt. But in practice, Queen Elizabeth fulfilled the role of Defender of Faith, supporting other churches and faiths through her long rule. Indeed, when the sovereign crosses the Scottish border, they instantly change their denomination - from Church of England to Church of Scotland. The Queen made sure that all Christian denominations were supported as well as other faiths. She was never simply protecting or defending the Church of England to the detriment of other denominations and faiths.

King Charles has now made it clear that he will continue this practice. On Sept 16th he said, “I am a committed Anglican Christian, and at my coronation I will take an oath relating to the settlement of the Church of England.” He also said that “As a member of the Church of England, my Christian beliefs have love at their very heart. By my most profound convictions, therefore – as well as by my position as sovereign – I hold myself bound to respect those who follow other spiritual paths.”

I can’t believe that there are any members of the Church of England who would not wholeheartedly agree with this. Being defender of the Faith is in no way something that should exclude King Charles from defending those from other Christian denominations and those who belong to different faiths.

The recent statement of King Charles is a welcome clarification of his position on this matter and is bound to be shared by the overwhelming majority of people in this country and it carries on the tradition of openness, tolerance and inclusiveness that Queen Elizabeth herself embodied.

Best wishes, Jonathan Cooper.

Welbury WI report of the September meeting

The September meeting welcomed Joyce Scott, presenting her photographic record of seven years assisting the research of Northumbria university in cataloguing the flora and fauna of the rocky shores of the Northeast coast. The stunning close up images, many magnified or taken underwater, captured the beauty of seaweeds, and invertebrates and molluscs living symbiotically on and around them. Joyce's discoveries gave us all new eyes to really look and understand what we're seeing when taking a walk at low tides. We were all so entranced we hope to have one of next year's meetings on a beach rock-pooling with Joyce.

aut special effort is made to get on top of all the jobs, but to do this, volunteers are needed (please see below for dates and full details) -

St Leonard's churchyard tidying day Sunday 2nd October anytime from 10am.

Many hands make light work so if anyone can spare a few hours that would be much appreciated. If the weather is wet this will become the indoor day with hope for better weather on the 22nd of October. Jobs that need doing are listed below but could be done prior to this date if anyone has chance: Hedge cutting, Weeding & sweeping the path - Strimming under the hedges and the areas of long grass - Cutting back any self-set trees especially ash & elder – Removing ivy where possible or cut it back - Tidying around all the graves (the lawnmowers get fairly close, but some spaces are inaccessible)

And indoor cleaning day Saturday 22nd October anytime from 11am.

Again, all help greatly appreciated to clean from top to bottom ready for Advent & Christmas. A list of jobs will be on top of the font, from removing the high cobwebs to cleaning the brass.

Refreshments will be freely available both days.
